

Position Sensitive Detectors for Synchrotron Applications

HENDRIX Jules

Marresearch, Hamburg, Germany

First, a bit of history will be given to show where it all comes from. Second, the requirements for the demanding application of protein crystallography will be discussed for the different types of detectors. The main topic will be the influence of the noise components on the accuracy of the measurements.